PropertyBridge, Domin-8 Form Partnership to Increase Rent Payment Options

By Kelly Sheehan, Online News Editor

NOVEMBER 01, 2006 -- Cincinnati -- PropertyBridge, an electronic payments services firm, and Domin-8 Enterprise Solutions, a property management software provider, have formed a partnership to integrate the companies' software and technology.

Denis Clark, vice president of marketing for Domin-8, told MHN that PropertyBridge has provided his firm's software with the capability to accept electronic payments through a Web site.

Clark said the decision to partner with PropertyBridge was an easy one. Over the last year, Domin-8 acquired three property management software companies: the locally based American Computer Software, Cincinnati-based PMAS and Vista, Calif.-based Logicbuilt. "But none of them had the ability to accept electronic payments," Clark said. "It was the classic situation of whether we should built it ourselves or ally with someone who could build it for us.”

When property managers use PropertyBridge’s services, residents can pay rents through a Web site using credit cards, debit cards or electronic checks. The integration allows all payment information to be electronically transferred to the property management software and applied to residents’ ledgers. “Now, companies get the money faster and don’t have to send agents to the bank to make deposits,” Clark said. “They’re more productive, and human error is eliminated, because there is no human posting.”

“The inherent flexibility of our payments solution makes it easy for multifamily professionals to tailor payment types to match the demographics of their residents,” said Jason Gardner, president of PropertyBridge. “[The partnership] allows all sizes and types of property management firms to realize the benefits of a centralized and automated payments approach.”
